Alignment of WLR Collective Commitment with Global Frameworks

- Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action:

The Beijing Declaration called for:

- “Governments to ensure that national legislative and administrative reform processes, including those linked to land reform, decentralization, and economic reorientation, promote women’s rights, particularly those of rural women and women living in poverty.”
- “Develop, review, and implement laws and procedures that guarantee women’s equal access to and control over economic resources, including land, property rights, inheritance, credit, and savings schemes such as women’s banks and cooperatives.”

Alignment with WLR Collective Commitment:

- The WLR Collective Commitment upholds this by advocating for securing land, housing, and property rights for 100 million women and youth.
- It calls on governments to facilitate access to justice for women claiming land rights, including inheritance rights, directly supporting Beijing’s objectives.
- It pushes for sex-disaggregated land statistics, a key measure urged under the Beijing Declaration to monitor progress and accountability.

- GEF Action Coalitions:

EJR Coalition called for:

- “Calls for increased women’s access to and control over productive resources through increasing access to and control over land, gender-responsive financial products and services, and the number of firms owned by women by 2026.”

FACJ Coalition called for:

- “Calls for enhancing and leveraging the capacity of millions more women and girls to build resilience to climate and disaster risks, mitigate climate change, and address loss and damage, including through community-based cooperative models and land rights and tenure security.”

Alignment with WLR Collective Commitment:

- The WLR Collective Commitment supports the GEF goals by integrating gender and land rights into climate, food systems, and biodiversity policies.
- It mobilizes civil society, governments, and financial institutions to channel funding directly to grassroots women-led organizations and advance gender-responsive financing.
- It demands corporate accountability and compliance with human rights frameworks in land governance and reinforces the calls for fair resource distribution.

- Pact for the Future:

The Pact for the Future called for:

- “We will take comprehensive and targeted measures to eradicate poverty by addressing the multidimensional nature of poverty, including through rural development strategies and investments and innovations in the social sector.”
- “We will undertake legislation and administrative reforms to give women equal rights with men to economic resources, including access to ownership and control over land and other forms of property, credit, inheritance, natural resources, and appropriate new technology.”
- “We will ensure that national legislative and administrative reform processes, including those linked to land reform, decentralization, and economic reorientation, promote women’s rights.”

Alignment with WLR Collective Commitment:

- The WLR Collective Commitment prioritizes securing land tenure for women and youth, reinforcing the Pact’s goal of legislative and administrative reform for equal land rights.
- It directly supports land restoration strategies as a condition to address climate change and biodiversity loss, in line with the Pact’s environmental and sustainability goals.
- It promotes the active participation of women in land governance and administration, ensuring decision-making roles for grassroots and indigenous women.
